A CAREER IN NURSING

The profession of nursing is a creative and rewarding career for women and men.

Nurse’s today practice in a variety of settings including hospitals, clinics, in the home, industry, educational institutions, long-term care facilities, government and private practice.

The role of the nurse in the future is predicted to expand as a major provider of health care.

This is an exciting time to consider a career in nursing.

This directory was prepared by the

GENERAL INFORMATION

Schools of Nursing: Approved/Accredited

The Massachusetts or the Rhode Island Board of Registration in Nursing has granted approval to all schools of nursing listed and described in this directory. In addition, a number of schools are accredited by professional accrediting agencies recognized as such by the United States Department of Education. The distinction between approved and accredited is as follows:

Approved: Minimum standards for nursing education are mandatory in every state and compliance with these standards constitutes state approval. In Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the Board of Registration in Nursing is required by law to establish rules and regulations governing the criteria for approval of schools for registered nurses and practical nurses. Criteria include qualification of faculty, requirements for student admission and standards for school teaching equipment.

Students must graduate from a school of nursing approved by the Board of Registration in Nursing and offer satisfactory proof of “good moral character” to be eligible to sit for the National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX). To receive a license to practice as a registered nurse (RN) or a licensed practical nurse (LPN), candidates must successfully pass the NCLEX exam.

Accredited: Program accreditation means the formal recognition of the nursing education program by a specialized professional accrediting agency recognized as such by the United States Department of Education. Two agencies commonly used by nursing programs for accreditation are: the National League for Nursing Accrediting Commission (NLNAC), which is now known as Accreditation Commission for Education in Nursing (ACEN), and the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education (CCNE).

The law does not require school accreditation. A school, which has received accreditation, assures the student that its nursing program has met standards higher than the minimum required by law for nursing education programs.

Students wishing to pursue nursing to the Master’s Degree level should be aware of the fact that a majority of Master’s Degree nursing programs require graduation from an accredited Baccalaureate nursing program as a prerequisite for admission.
Admission Requirements
The state Boards have established graduation from an accredited high school or equivalent education as demonstrated by a high school equivalency certificate as a minimum requirement for admission to any school of nursing. Many schools have admission requirements, such as entrance examinations, in addition to this minimum. Prospective students are urged to contact directly the school of their choice for more specific information.

Additional Costs
Additional costs include fees, books, uniforms, insurance, supplies, meals, transportation, etc. that the tuition does not always cover. The actual costs vary from program to program and prospective students should contact each school directly for specific charges.

Financial
Financial assistance is available through federal, state and private programs that offer scholarships, grants and loans. Contact the financial aid offices at all schools you are considering.
ASSOCIATE DEGREE PROGRAMS IN NURSING

Most Associate Degree Programs in Nursing are two years in length and are offered at colleges, universities, community colleges or junior colleges. A college preparatory program is recommended for admission; applicants should check the criteria of individual schools. The course of study includes a major emphasis on nursing theory and practice plus general education courses including sciences and social sciences. An Associate’s Degree is granted at graduation. Graduates are eligible to sit for the NCLEX-RN exam.

DIPLOMA PROGRAMS IN NURSING

Diploma/Hospital School Programs in Nursing are two to three years in length and are offered at hospitals. A college preparatory program is recommended for admission, including mathematics and science courses; applicants should check the criteria of individual schools. The course of study includes nursing theory and practice along with general education courses including biological, social and physical sciences. The programs offer early patient contact with a wide range of clinical experience. A Diploma is granted at graduation. Graduates are eligible to sit for the NCLEX-RN exam.

PRACTICAL NURSING PROGRAMS

Practical nursing programs are offered at hospitals, community colleges or vocational schools. Most programs are one-year full time or two years part-time. A high school diploma or GED is required for admission. Other admission requirements are determined by individual schools and may include such things as pre-entrance exams, references and an interview. Practical nursing curriculum includes nursing theory and practice, biological and behavioral sciences, and vocational issues. A diploma is granted at graduation. Graduates are eligible to sit for the NCLEX-PN exam.

MASTER’S & DOCTORAL DEGREE PROGRAMS IN NURSING

Graduate programs in nursing are designed to prepare nurses for advanced practice and research. Nurses in advanced practice are professionals committed to the delivery and study of high-quality nursing practice.

Master’s programs offer clinical specialization in a variety of areas. These programs may also offer preparation in the nurse educator or manager role. Some programs may offer dual degrees with other disciplines, such as business or public health. Program length may vary according to specialization requirements. Part-time study may be available for the working nurse. Upon successful program completion, a master’s degree is awarded. Where applicable, graduates may sit for specialization certification exams.

Doctoral programs focus on nursing knowledge development through original research so graduates may assume roles as scholars in a variety of settings. Upon successful program completion, a doctor’s degree is awarded.
