About the Academy

The Academy of Nursing Education is an innovative program created to call attention to the exceptional work of those who are transforming nursing education.

History:

The NLN Academy of Nursing Education was created in 2007 to recognize and capitalize on the wisdom of outstanding individuals who have made enduring and substantial contributions to nursing education. There are currently more than 300 fellows in the Academy of Nursing Education.

Purpose:

The NLN Academy of Nursing Education fosters excellence in nursing education by recognizing and capitalizing on the wisdom of outstanding individuals in and outside the profession who have contributed to nursing education in a way that is substantive, enduring, and impactful. Fellows are expected to provide visionary leadership in nursing education and in the Academy, and to support the vision of the National League for Nursing.

Transform Nursing Education

Individuals inducted as fellows form a distinguished national and international network of educators whose accomplishments beyond their employment expectations are:

- a. Acknowledged for innovative teaching and learning strategies, nursing education research, faculty development, academic leadership, promotion of public policy that advances nursing education and collaborative educational practice with community partners.
- b. Recognized for their expertise in nursing education and are invaluable assets to the nursing education community.
- c. Dedicated to transforming nursing and nursing education by influencing change, advancing excellence in nursing education, and empowering others to achieve success as nurse educators within and external to one's work role and position.

Academy Review Panel

All Academy applications are thoroughly reviewed by a panel of peers appointed by the NLN Chair. A candidate for review must be selected by an affirmative vote of 51 percent of the review panel members present and voting. Following the Academy Review Panel meeting, the NLN Board of Governors reviews and votes on all recommendations before candidates are notified of the panel's decision. All decisions made by the review panel and NLN Board of Governors are final.

Frequently Asked Questions

What are the most common reasons applicants are not accepted to the Academy?

1. Candidate does not show evidence of substantial, enduring, and impactful contributions beyond those of their employment.
2. Candidate does not show evidence of enduring and substantial contributions across many years and/or does not show evidence of the impact of this work.
3. Candidate does not have a clear body of work for which they are known and/or has not disseminated their work in ways that have influenced and advanced nursing education.
4. Candidate's body of work is not in nursing education or has not influenced nursing education.
5. Candidate's application is inconsistent with stated area of contribution. See list of areas below:
 - Teaching/Learning innovations
 - Faculty development
 - Research/scholarship in nursing education
 - Leadership in nursing education
 - Public policy related to nursing education
 - Collaborative partnerships (education/practice/community)

If my contributions have been in the area of clinical practice or public policy, am I eligible for fellowship?

While contributions to the advancement of clinical nursing practice or public policy related to health care delivery are important, they are not the type of contributions expected of regular fellows in the Academy of Nursing Education. However, if candidates can demonstrate how their work in clinical practice or public policy enhances nursing education, this work will meet the application requirements.

What is an example of evidence of enduring contribution?

Give specific information about the outcome(s), results, or use of your body of work. Provide data when available or applicable. For example, "developed an innovative curriculum" is not as specific as "Consulted with several schools to revise their BSN curriculum to include informatics competencies. Results of employer surveys at these schools indicated students were better prepared for clinical practice in their agencies because of the revisions to the curriculum."

Do I need to identify a primary area of excellence?

Yes, you must identify a primary area of excellence (area of contribution). While most candidates have expertise in many areas of nursing education, the candidate should identify one overarching theme or area that encompasses the other areas of excellence.

If I don't have a doctoral degree, can I still apply to become a fellow?

Yes. The criteria for regular fellowship only require that you are or were licensed to practice as a nurse.

What are the characteristics of the candidates selected to become fellows?

Candidates must meet all eligibility criteria and present a cohesive application. Accepted candidates have answered all the questions in the self-assessment with strong, clear evidence and incorporated this information into their essay statements, nominator statements, and curriculum vitae.

What should I include in my curriculum vitae?

The curriculum vitae provides evidence of your substantial, enduring, and impactful contributions to nursing education. The curriculum vitae should provide concrete information about your primary area of excellence and include examples of honors and awards, publications, presentations, research, and service in that area.

By selecting relevant examples, your curriculum vitae can demonstrate a record of continued contributions, for example a sustained record of dissemination of your work (publications using APA citations, presentations); or a leadership trajectory, for example moving from a committee member to a committee chair, to a member of a board of the organization. If there are unusual circumstances or gaps (for example, gaps of employment, service, or publication productivity) it is appropriate to comment on these in your statement.

What is visionary leadership?

Visionary leadership refers to one's ability to envision changes that will enhance and improve nursing education at the state, regional, national and/or international level(s) and enlist others to help make that vision become reality. It involves true leadership skills including effective communication, an ability to articulate the vision clearly, an ability to work collaboratively with others, an ability to manage conflicts that may arise during the process of change, dedication to and passion about the vision, and a willingness to take risks.

The vision may relate to any number of education-focused concerns including promoting student engagement in the learning process, finding ways to help disadvantaged students be successful in nursing, integrating technology into the learning process, or enhancing the transition of individuals from clinical roles to the teaching role. Articulation and realization of the vision may occur through publications, presentations, research, consultation, service in professional organizations, mentoring, or any number of other strategies.

If I teach in an associate degree or practical nurse program, am a consultant or am not a nurse, can I become a fellow?

Yes. There are no requirements that fellows teach in any particular type of program or that they hold a faculty appointment at all. Individuals who are in faculty positions may teach or hold administrative or staff positions in practical nursing, associate degree, diploma, baccalaureate, master's, or doctoral programs in nursing. Individuals who do not hold faculty appointments also are eligible for fellowship. Non-nurses are eligible for fellowship through the honorary application process.

Do I have to have a strong record of funded research in order to be recommended as a fellow?

No. It is not a requirement that you have a strong record of funded research for recommendation to fellowship. If you have completed extensive research – with or without funding – it must be research that clearly impacts nursing education. For example, research into nursing interventions related to care of a particular patient population may inform what a faculty member teaches, but it does not influence nursing education per se. Research that influences nursing education itself focuses on teaching and learning, curriculum design and implementation, faculty development, new pedagogies, and so on.

More important than the completion or funding of this research is that you demonstrate how the findings from your studies have influenced the design and delivery of nursing education. For example, you might list schools or faculty who are using your work or the extent to which your work is cited by scholars outside your own school.

May I submit the application by mail?

No. The NLN will not accept applications submitted by mail. All documents (application, statement, curriculum vitae, and nominator statements) must be submitted online.

Is there a limit to the number of fellows who can be inducted in any given year?

No. There is no minimum or maximum number of fellows to be inducted in any given year. If 100 applications are received and each one clearly meets all criteria for fellowship, all 100 can be recommended for induction as fellows. Likewise, if there are 25 applications and only five meet all criteria, then only those five will be recommended for induction as fellows.

If I am not selected for fellowship the first time, may I apply again?

You may apply again at any time. The Academy Review Panel believes that at least two years is needed for a candidate to improve their application before reapplying, but it is not a requirement. There is no limit to the number of times a person can submit an application to be considered for fellowship in the Academy of Nursing Education.

Are You Ready to Apply? Self-Assessment for Regular Candidates

The Academy Review Panel will attempt to answer the questions below as they read your application statements, curriculum vitae, and nominator statements. Therefore, the best advice the Academy Review Panel offers to potential candidates is to complete these questions as a self-assessment before applying for fellowship, and when applying, to integrate the answers to these questions into your essay statements.

Everything listed below is a requirement for “enduring and substantial:”

1. Do you have a focused body of work?
 - How are you recognized as an expert by your nursing colleagues in one of the six areas of contribution? See page 5 for a list of areas.
2. How has your work impacted nursing education at a state, regional, national, and/or international level(s)?
3. What evidence including data do you have to show meaningful outcomes for your body of work?
4. How has your dissemination of this work impacted the nursing education community?
5. Is the work significant to nursing education?
 - For example, have you been a primary or co-investigator of a state, nationally, or internationally funded research project? Was the project successfully implemented and results disseminated or is there a well-developed plan to accomplish this goal in the near future?
 - Have you contributed significantly to a body of research that impacts nursing education?
6. How is your work enduring and substantial in your area of contribution? Are your contributions a result of continued, focused effort which has occurred over time?
7. Now, and in the future, how will you be a visionary leader (evidenced by teaching, service, research and/or consultation) for nursing education?
8. How you can assist in advancing the NLN's mission, and provide a clear vision to assist in achieving the NLN's goals?

See the FAQs for a list of common reasons that applications are not accepted to the Academy.

Consider: Of your responses to the questions above, which can be described best by your nominators? Please do not repeat examples in your application.
